

CONTENTS

Introduction CONSIDERING THE ‘OTHERNESS’ AND ATTRACTION OF ISLAMIC FUNDAMENTALISM	17
The Perception of an Islamic Fundamentalist Threat	18
How ‘Other’ are Muslim Fundamentalists?	21
Fundamentalism, not Terrorism	23
Research Questions	24
The Added Value of a Criminological Study	25
Structure of the Book	28
 1 REMOVING THE VEIL	 31
1.1 Islamic Fundamentalism in the West: The Dutch Case and a British Impression	32
1.2 Getting Started: Three Research Methods	32
1.2.1 Conducting Interviews	33
1.2.2 Getting in Place for Observation	36
1.2.3 Exploring Online Interactions	38
1.3 Ethical Issues when Entering the Field	39
1.3.1 Being an ‘Unveiled’ Non-Muslim Researcher	40
1.3.2 Anonymity and Confidentiality	40
1.3.3 Assuming Informed Consent	40
1.3.4 Acceptance of Closed Inner Doors	41
1.4 In the Field: Countering Obstacles and Limitations to Validity	41
1.4.1 Problems in Gaining Trust	41
1.4.2 Internal Validity: Social Desirability and Hidden Transcripts	44
1.4.3 Validity of Virtual Reality and Personalities	45
1.4.4 External Validity	46
1.5 Human Factors in Fieldwork	46
1.5.1 Reliability: Opening up to the Insider Perspective	47
1.5.2 Dealing with Expectations of Respondents	48
1.6 Registration of Observations and Interviews	48
1.6.1 Observations: Overt Researcher, Covert Notetaking	49
1.6.2 Interviews: No Recording Please!	50
1.7 Analysis of Data	51
1.8 Summary	51

2 ISLAMIC FUNDAMENTALISM AS A THREAT TO SOCIETY?	53
2.1 Conceptualizing Islamic Fundamentalism	54
2.2 Global Sources, Local Manifestations of Islamic Fundamentalism	55
2.2.1 The Rise of Transnational Fundamentalism	56
2.2.2 The Resonance of Islamic Fundamentalism among Dutch Muslims	58
2.3 Anti-Western Beliefs and Behaviour?	61
2.3.1 The Islamic Way of Life: Islam is Everywhere and Everything	62
2.3.2 Contact between Believers and Unbelievers	64
2.3.3 (Western Liberal) Democracy versus Sharia	68
2.3.4 International Issues and Jihad	72
2.4 Moderate Muslims versus Orthodox, Radical, and Extremist Fundamentalists	78
2.4.1 Moderate	80
2.4.2 Orthodox	80
2.4.3 Radical and Extremist	82
2.5 Summary	84
3 CONVERSION, RADICALIZATION AND IDENTITY STRAIN	87
3.1 Conceptualizing Identity and (Radical) Conversion: Continuous Processes	88
3.2 Understanding Conversion to Orthodox, Radical and Extremist Islam	91
3.2.1 The Desire to Convert	92
3.2.2 The Temptation of Fundamentalist Interpretations	95
3.2.3 Explanatory Models and Links with (Criminological) Theories	96
3.3 Multiple Experiences Contributing to Identity Crisis	97
3.3.1 Being Adrift	99
3.3.2 Experiencing Personal Loss and Suffering	100
3.3.3 Experiencing Social Exclusion and Lack of Recognition	101
3.3.4 A Desire for Transcendence	104
3.3.5 The Common Factor: Identity Crisis and a Quest for Personal Meaning	107
3.4 Different Directions: A Role of Significant Others and 'Identity Strain'?	108
3.4.1 Significant Others	109
3.4.2 Gradations of Identity Crisis and (Radical) Conversion	113
3.4.3 The Nature of the Crisis: Identity Strain	116
3.5 Summary	119
4 AN ORTHODOX FOCUS ON POSITIVE SELF-IDENTIFICATION	121
4.1 Identity, Identification and Difference	121
4.2 Fundamentalist Meaning Systems as a Source of Secure Identities	125
4.2.1 Absolute Truth's Promise of Stability	125
4.2.2 The Security of Relying on a Higher Power	127
4.3 The Security of Fundamentalist Boundaries in Everyday Life	131
4.3.1 Rules as Protection in the Pluralist Chaos of Modern Life	131

4.3.2 A Sense of Belonging	134
4.3.3 Islam as Master Status Determining Trait: Being Somebody Good	138
4.4 Summary	146
5 A RADICAL AND EXTREMIST FOCUS ON RESISTANCE	149
5.1 Discourses of Resistance	150
5.1.1 Distancing from Former Life	150
5.1.2 Resistance to Western/Dutch Culture	152
5.1.3 Superiority to Other Religions	155
5.1.4 Resistance to External Labels	158
5.1.5 Criticism of Other Muslims	160
5.1.6 Criticism of Islamophobia	165
5.2 Resistance as Coping Strategy for Identity Strain?	170
5.2.1 The Orthodox Respondents: An Inward Focus	171
5.2.2 The Radical and Extremist Respondents: Resistance Identities	173
5.3 Summary	177
6 REPRESENTING PURIFICATION AND RESISTANCE	179
6.1 Becoming a Fundamentalist Representative of Islam	179
6.1.1 Presentation of Self through Names	180
6.1.2 Linguistic Expression	181
6.1.3 Physical Appearances	183
6.1.4 Islamic Behaviour and Activities	190
6.2 Keeping the Community Together: Social Control and Impression Management	199
6.2.1 Introducing the Fundamentalist Communities	199
6.2.2 Confirmation and Stimulation	202
6.2.3 Critique	204
6.2.4 Impression Management: Ignoring Disagreement and Incorrect Behaviour	209
6.3 Internalizing Muslim Identities and Dealing with Discrepancies between Attitudes and Behaviour	210
6.4 Merits: Self-Identity, Belonging and Social Status	213
6.5 Summary	217
7 A 'LATE MODERN' IDENTITY PROJECT UNDER STRAIN	219
7.1 'Late modern' Fundamentalists	220
7.2 Bricolaging an Explanatory Model: A Modern Identity Project, Subcultures, and Strain	223
7.2.1 Dutch Fundamentalism and Late Modernity	223
7.2.2 Bricolaging a Theory of Identity Strain	226
7.3 Summary	237

Conclusions WESTERN FUNDAMENTALISTS: THE NEED FOR AN ALTERNATIVE APPROACH	239
Fundamentalist Development, Reasons and Motives	239
Differential Experiences: An Orthodox Inward and Radical/Extremist Outward Focus	240
Dutch Fundamentalists as a Modern Phenomenon	241
Research Implications: A More Nuanced View of Dutch Muslim Fundamentalists	242
Nuancing the Image of Islamic Fundamentalism as a Threat	243
A Glocal Phenomenon: The Sameness of Dutch Fundamentalist Muslims	245
Theoretical Implications: Merits of Interdisciplinary Bricolaging	246
Policy Implications: A Narrower, More Inclusive Approach	247
Remaining Questions and Suggestions for Further Research	250
 BIBLIOGRAPHY	 253
 GLOSSARY OF ARABIC TERMS	 275
 APPENDIX RESPONDENTS INTERVIEWS	 277