Leopold | Mauritshuis

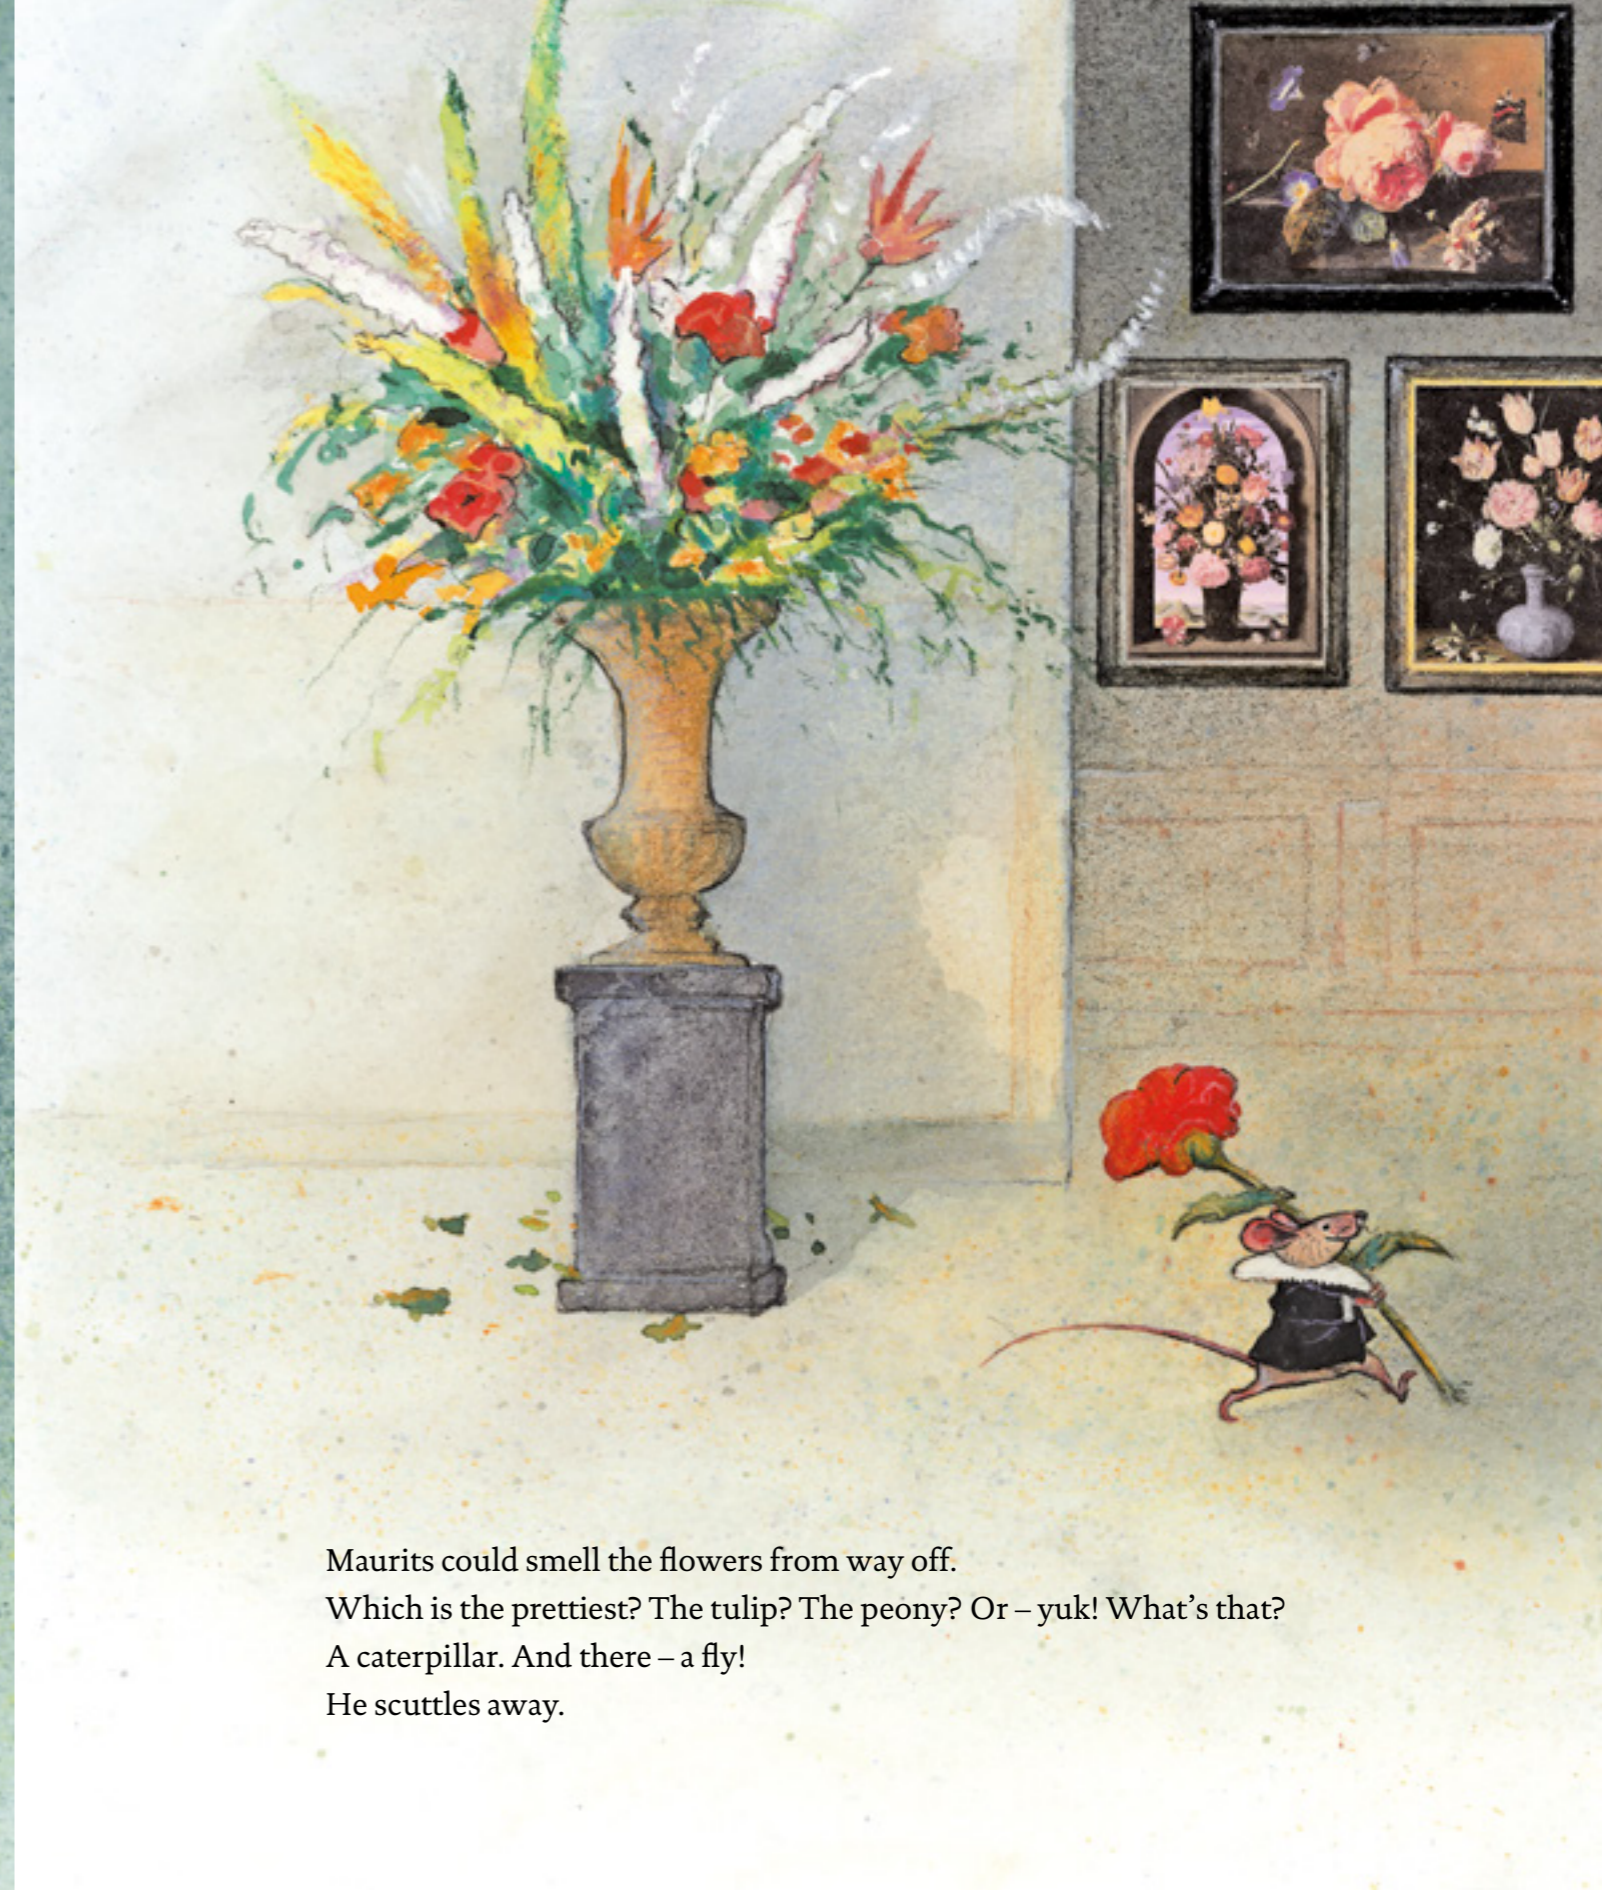

At night, when things are quiet, out pops Maurits Mouse.

He stretches, straightens his collar and smooths down his coat.
He's in charge now.

Everywhere there are delicious things to eat.
Strawberries here, a huge chunk of cheese there.
His tummy rumbles.

Maurits could smell the flowers from way off.
Which is the prettiest? The tulip? The peony? Or – yuk! What's that?
A caterpillar. And there – a fly!
He scuttles away.
